

Presents: 2 - 4:30 PM August 7th, 2021

A free workshop by author
Patrick Cotter

“What voice in yonder
writing breaks?”

Who is talking when you're writing? What voice do readers hear? What words do you (or your characters) use? What do you want readers to feel? These are a few of the choices that go into creating a voice. They are also the questions we'll explore in the 'Voice Activation Playshop' through presentations, discussion, and individual and small group exercises.

Patrick Cotter has been making a living writing for fun and profit for four decades. He has written print and radio news, speeches, plays and video scripts, advertising copy, and online content. For the past 15 years, Patrick has also served as a writing instructor at Capilano University.

In their empty nest in Burnaby, he and his wife have been doing zoom yoga and dance classes, catching up on streaming content, and experimenting with new dishes that test the limits of their culinary skills as they wait for the pandemic to fully subside.

Attendees must pre-register to get the ZOOM link.
Email Tri.City.Wordsmiths@Gmail.com to register